The Wright Brothers’ Hawthorn Hill
Donation of a National Treasure

On August 18, 2006, the eve of National Aviation Day and of Orville Wright’s 135th birthday, NCR Corporation donated the Wright Brothers’ home in Oakwood – Hawthorn Hill – to The Wright Family Foundation of The Dayton Foundation. When they did so, they transferred more than a National Historic Landmark of major historic and public interest. They transferred a dream.

“When my father died, I developed a desire to finish up his work to enable people to realize the place Dayton plays in aviation history,” said Amanda Wright Lane, great-grandniece of Wilbur and Orville Wright. “My brother, Stephen, shares this dream. We always hoped Hawthorn Hill would be open to the public in some controlled manner as a way for people to learn.”

“And it was just good old-fashioned integrity on the part of NCR to want to return a home to a family and to a community,” said Stephen Wright, the Wright Brothers’ great-grandnephew. “It was so fitting that a company like NCR, who purchased the home and preserved and protected it following Orville’s death in 1948, would see this aviation treasure for what it really was. We are so grateful to NCR for this gift and for The Dayton Foundation for helping us to receive it.”

Dayton-Montgomery County Scholarship Program
New Partnership Benefits College-Bound Students, the Community

Two large stewards of scholarship programs for youth – the Dayton-Montgomery County Scholarship Program (DMCSP) and The Dayton Foundation – have formed a new partnership that will better serve Montgomery County students seeking college scholarships. The $14 million DMCSP now is the Foundation’s single largest fund.

“This partnership is a perfect example of two large funders coming together for the good of the community,” said Michael M. Parks, president of The Dayton Foundation. “Both organizations will benefit from synergies that will come from two scholarship-awarding institutions operating side by side.”

Since its inception in 1981, DMCSP has awarded almost $10.5 million to more than 10,300 graduating seniors with at least a 2.5 GPA and with financial need. The recipients are from Montgomery County’s 16 school districts and private school systems or are students who have received their GED.
The Dayton Foundation has a long history of innovativeness and flexibility to adapt to changing needs and opportunities. Two recent examples illustrate this.

NCR Corporation’s August gift of Hawthorn Hill to The Wright Family Foundation of The Dayton Foundation was near ground for our foundation. It also appears to be the first time nationally that a National Historic Landmark was gifted through a community foundation. Given the uniqueness of the gift, The Dayton Foundation really had no models to follow. It was a gift of large historic proportions, representing one of the gems of Dayton’s and the nation’s aviation heritage.

The gift of Hawthorn Hill is noteworthy, however, for more than the obvious measure of what it adds to the generosity of NCR’s gift. It’s worthy of note also because it represents an excellent example of how community foundations can serve-in ways people often don’t imagine. A gift of cash or stock to a donor’s fund to make grants for the donor’s favorite charitable purposes is how most people commonly think of a community foundations’ role. But gifting a National Historic Landmark and then being asked to assist in delivering it to another entity or entities that can protect it and use it the thoughtful stipulation of preservation for public purposes, would come back to the care of the Wright family through their affiliated foundation of The Dayton Foundation. NCR knew of the Wrights’ dedication to aviation history and to the preservation of the Wright Brothers’ heritage, as well as their passion for helping Dayton to take its rightful place in aviation history. When The Wright Family Foundation was brought into the picture by NCR regarding their plans for Hawthorn Hill, The Dayton Foundation was contacted by the family and was poised to help find a way to make this great gift possible. That is an unexpected role a community foundation can play.

Another very important and unusual recent addition to The Dayton Foundation was that of the Dayton-Montgomery County Scholarship Program (DMCSP). Though a merging of backroom operations, an alliance was born of two large stewards of scholarship programs for youth—DMCSP and The Dayton Foundation, together disbursing roughly $2 million a year for local student scholarships. With the Foundation providing DMCSP with backroom and other Foundation services, it helps DMCSP reduce their overhead and allows them to focus on awarding grants and on growing their fund. In addition, it creates the opportunity to better serve Montgomery County students seeking college scholarships through the synergy of two major scholarship-awarding organizations operating side by side. We frequently speak about the importance and economies of collaboration. This is a wonderful example and gives us another opportunity to practice what we preach.

My point is that our collaboration with DMCSP and our ability to help The Wright Family Foundation accept NCR’s gift of Hawthorn Hill are two occurrences few people would have predicted. That is the beauty of a community foundation, in that it has the nimbleness to be able to flex and accommodate unusual gifts or collaborations to serve the community good. Your support for The Dayton Foundation keeps us growing and strong and able to bend with the demands of a changing world.

“...we want to… seek better ways of doing business and determine how to become an even greater asset to Montgomery County students seeking scholarship dollars.”

Dr. Donald R. Thompson, executive director, Dayton-Montgomery County Scholarship Program

Dr. Donald R. Thompson, of the DMCSP Board. “This partnership allows us to focus on awarding grants and growing the fund. It will enable us to be more strategic with our scholarship dollars.”

Students can access information about DMCSP, as well as scholarships available through other Dayton Foundation funds. They can do this through ScholarshipCONNECT, the Foundation’s searchable, online scholarship directory, located at www.daytonfoundation.org/scholars. php. ScholarshipCONNECT makes it easier for students to match their educational interests with available scholarships.

Dr. Donald R. Thompson, executive director of DMCSP, said he is proud that DMCSP now is affiliated with the Foundation. “The cost savings is important, but The Dayton Foundation has a trusted name. We believe we do, too. Now that we are under one roof, we want to put our heads together, seek better ways of doing business and determine how to become an even greater asset to Montgomery County students seeking scholarship dollars.”

“Clearly we will be stronger together,” Mike Parks said. “And we are delighted to be working with Dr. Thompson, a premier educational leader and resource, not only in our region, but also in Ohio.”

The gift from NCR puts the Wrights and The Dayton Foundation to work to find the right path to make the Wrights’ dream come true.

“We're working with aviation and elected officials and other community leaders to do the right thing by both our community and by the demands of history,” said Dayton Foundation President Michael M. Parks. “Hawthorn Hill, the home built by the Wright Brothers, truly is a national and international treasure and a proud part of Dayton’s heritage. We all are so grateful to NCR for their care of Hawthorn Hill over the years and for this unprecedented gift. To our knowledge, it’s the first National Historic Landmark donated through a community foundation. This is a wonderful moment for history, and one we are approaching with great care.”

One of the things that makes Hawthorn Hill (the home of Orville, Katharine and Bishop Milton Wright, their father) so significant is that it was designed in the early 1900s by the Wright Brothers themselves, Orville Wright especially. It incorporates Orville's affinity for gadgetry: a unique, central vacuum-cleaning system; a multi-jet, tubular, three-sided shower fixture; a special system to collect, recycle and filter rainwater; and more.

The beautiful, world-class, 1914 mansion was designed with two identical entrances and upstairs apartments, one for Wilbur and one for Orville. While Orville lived there from 1914 to 1948, Wilbur would never live in it—he died in 1912 before construction on the house began. Many dignitaries visited the house over the years, including Charles Lindbergh, Henry Ford, Alexander Graham Bell, Thomas Edison, Admiral Richard E. Byrd, Carl Sandburg, President Franklin D. Roosevelt, among others.

But what the Wrights most want people to understand is that this is a home where the Wright family lived, played and thrived. It is the place, they believe, where people can come to understand the human side of the men who changed the world through the invention of controlled, powered flight. And it is a vitally important part of the puzzle of aviation history for which Dayton is becoming increasingly better known.

“Hawthorn Hill played host to many family Christmases, Thanksgivings, birthday parties and even two weddings, not to mention all of the Orville Wright practical jokes that were sure to accompany each of these events,” said Stephen Wright.

“The home was both a treasured place where the large, Wright family would gather for play and for family events and the place where Wilbur lived as an inquisitive, active and very human man. It also was where the memory of Wilbur and the other Wrights remained very much alive,” said Orville Wright's study remains as it appeared at the time of his death in 1948.

Amanda Wright Lane recalls the many stories told around the family dinner table. “Uncle Wil was so incredibly clever, a thinker, a theoretician. Uncle Orv could take Uncle Wil's ideas and turn them into something you could hold in your hand. They were such an incredible team. Uncle Orv was the more entrepreneurial of the two. He convinced his big brother Wilbur to go into the bicycle business, as well as the printing business. But then it was Wilbur who got into the idea that manned flight was possible.”

“Uncle Wil led them to this other interest, this new passion. So here you had Uncle Will leading them to the next thing, this new interest, this new passion,” said Amanda Wright Lane. “So here you had Uncle Wil leading them to the next thing, this new passion.”

“We’re working with aviation and elected officials and other community leaders to do the right thing by both our community and by the demands of history.”

Speakers at the press conference on August 18 to announce NCR’s donation of Hawthorn Hill include (left to right) Michael M. Parks, president of The Dayton Foundation; Rep. Michael R. Turner; William Nuti, president and CEO of NCR Corporation; Amanda Wright Lane, great-grandniece of the Wright Brothers, and Stephen Wright, great-grandnephew.

“I’m grateful to NCR for their generosity,” said Michael M. Parks, president of The Dayton Foundation. “They are a leader in corporate philanthropy and in the community of Dayton. They are an important partner with us in advancing the goals of the Wright Family Foundation, and this gift substantiates that.”

“We are so grateful to NCR for their generosity,” said Amanda Wright Lane, great-grandniece of the Wright Brothers. “We are also grateful to The Wright Family Foundation of The Dayton Foundation, which is a part of The Dayton Foundation. We are grateful to The Wright Family Foundation for their role in preserving and maintaining the home of Uncle Orv and his father, Bishop Milton Wright. We are grateful to NCR for their generosity, and we are grateful to the community of Dayton for their support.”

“The Wright Brothers were true visionaries,” said Orville Wright’s study remains today as it appeared at the time of his death in 1948. “They were men who loved their family and had human foibles that gave them dimension and made them interesting and even endearing.”

It is the aviation legacy of Hawthorn Hill that now will become the focus of the Wright Family’s efforts, with help from The Dayton Foundation and aviation and elected officials. “The Wright Family Foundation of The Dayton Foundation supports the preservation of aviation history,” said Mike Parks, “and we are supporting The Wright Family Foundation in their quest to share Hawthorn Hill. It’s the right thing to do for our region and for history.”

Vicki D. Pegg Named to The Dayton Foundation Governing Board

Vicki D. Pegg, longtime Dayton area resident and newly retired Montgomery County commissioner, has been named to The Dayton Foundation Governing Board.

Mrs. Pegg has been a public servant for 38 years. She was elected Montgomery County recorder in 1979 and held that office until 1994, when she was elected to the Montgomery County Commission. She has served on the County Commissioners Association of Ohio and was the former president of both the Ohio Council of County Officials and the Ohio Recorder’s Association. She also has been a member of the Dayton Dialogue on Race Relations Committee, Governor’s Workforce Policy Board, Montgomery County Economic Development/Government Equity Committee and the Oversight Council for the Neighborhood School Centers Project.

Among her many community and not-for-profit affiliations, Mrs. Pegg has served on the boards of Downtown Dayton Partnership, Dayton Philharmonic Orchestra, Goodwill Industries, Leadership Dayton, ThinkTV and YWCA, as well as served as campaign chair for the United Way of the Greater Dayton Area. She is a former chair of the Board of Trustees for Central State University and a former president of the Buckeye Trails Girl Scout Council.

A strong advocate for child protection issues in the community, Mrs. Pegg founded the Family Violence Task Force and co-founded and served as vice chair of Montgomery County Family and Children First Council.

Vicki Pegg and her husband, Robert D. McGriff, reside in Centerville, and have three daughters, two son-in-laws and four granddaughters.

Recent Discretionary Grants help build a better community

In the first half of 2006, Dayton Foundation donors made $13.1 million in grants to charitable organizations in the Greater Miami Valley region and beyond. This amount included $169,840 in discretionary grants approved by the Foundation’s Governing Board to help support the projects of the Miami Valley charitable organizations listed below.

These grants, made possible by donors who have placed no restrictions on their endowed funds, help the Foundation to address needs and opportunities in our community. Discretionary grants represent a small portion of the approximately 15,000 grants awarded to charities annually from Foundation funds, as directed or advised by donors.

James M. Hewitt Funds

Foresight Helps Youth and Visually Impaired People

James M. Hewitt, a well-to-do, well-respected Dayton businessman, often was considered soft-spoken, but firm. As president of Hewitt Soap Company, which his family founded in 1884, Mr. Hewitt helped the company to become one of the Midwest’s largest independent soap manufacturers. He spent his time and money privately, making life better for people who were unable to make it on their own, particularly youth and individuals with disabilities.

For years he volunteered for the Dayton Boys Club. He served on the board and raised funds for camperships, a pool and the former Boys Club Keowee Street facility.

Before passing away in 1963, Mr. Hewitt made provision in his will first to support his wife, Gladys Hewitt. Following her death, he provided for two endowed funds to be established through The Dayton Foundation. The funds were to ensure that his charitable work continued long beyond his lifetime.

“Jim made plans and executed them with a mind toward the future," said a longtime family friend. “He was wealthy, busy and important, but he wanted to perpetuate the niceties of life for all people, especially those who could not provide for themselves.”

James M. Hewitt

Since 1989, The James M. Hewitt Child Welfare Fund has awarded more than $654,000 to child welfare organizations, including more than $174,000 to the Out-of-School Youth Program, which contributed to the establishment of the Sinclair Community College Fast Forward Center in 2001. The Center provides alternative learning solutions for an estimated 5,600 Montgomery County school dropouts. Thanks to the Center, more than 3,000 young people have returned to school in the last five years, with 1,335 students having received their high school diplomas or GED equivalent. “I dropped out of school as a junior, because I’d been labeled visually impaired and learning disabled, and students constantly made fun of me,” said 19-year-old Whitney, who is dyslexic. “Teachers thought I couldn’t learn. I was told I was stupid and should just give up.”

Thanks to the Fast Forward Center’s Life Skills independent study program, Whitney is getting a second chance at life. She graduated with a 3.0 GPA, works as an interpretive guide at Carillon Historical Park and currently is pursuing a bachelor’s degree in social work. She wants to help at-risk youth. “Without this fund supporting the Fast Forward Center, I could not have graduated,” she said. “I’d still be out of school, without a job and struggling.”

Mr. Hewitt’s second fund benefits people who are blind, a great concern of Gladys Hewitt, who shared her husband’s passion for helping others. Since 1991, The James M. Hewitt Fund for the Blind has awarded more than $218,000 to improve the welfare of nearly 400 seeing-impaired persons.

“Jim was wealthy, busy and important, but he wanted to PERPETUATE THE NICETIES OF LIFE FOR ALL PEOPLE, ESPECIALLY THOSE WHO COULD NOT PROVIDE FOR THEMSELVES.”

Getting started with The Dayton Foundation

Service makes annual giving easy, tax-smart

If you write personal checks to your favorite charities, consider opening a Charitable Checking Account through The Dayton Foundation. The Charitable Checking Account Service is a unique, flexible and tax-smart way to direct grants to any IRS-approved charity in the United States.

Individuals can deposit assets into an account when it’s most tax advantageous for them and direct grants and gifts to charity at any time. In addition to cash, individuals can deposit an account with appreciated assets, such as stocks, mutual funds or real estate. This allows the full value of the assets for charitable purposes, undiminished by long-term capital gains taxes, when donated to The Dayton Foundation before the asset is sold.

Individuals also can do all of their giving online. They can monitor all account activity, including their gift and grant history, check their account balance, contribute to an account and make grant requests. The Dayton Foundation does all of the work, including verifying the charity’s IRS status, sending the funds to the selected charities and doing the bookkeeping. Grants to charity can be made in the individual’s name or, if the donor prefers, anonymously.

Lynn Burns, CPA, JD, CFP, owner of Burns Tax Consulting, LLC, frequently recommends the Charitable Checking Account Service to her clients. She has found the service particularly helpful for clients who want to increase their charitable tax benefits, including situations such as: the anticipation of an unusual event in a given tax year, an event that makes the individual subject to the Alternative Minimum Tax or a year of limited itemized deductions.

Best of all, the service is free. Plus, there is no minimum deposit or balance requirements. Individuals and organizations may open an account at www.daytonfoundation.org, or, if they prefer, they or their financial advisors may call one of the Foundation’s development staff at (937) 222-0410 or toll free at (877) 222-0410 to learn more about how the Charitable Checking Account Service can help them meet their financial and charitable-giving goals.

Before passing away in 1963, Mr. Hewitt made plans and executed them with a mind toward the future, said a longtime family friend. “He was wealthy, busy and important, but he wanted to perpetuate the niceties of life for all people, especially those who could not provide for themselves.”

James M. Hewitt never wanted to be honored for his charitable work during his life, but through his Dayton Foundation funds, his name and his intentions will live on.

Farm Fitness Program Motivates Children to Get Up and Move

Children’s lack of physical exercise has become a growing concern among parents and teachers. As more schools eliminate physical education classes, and television and video games consume students’ after-school hours, more children are leading sedentary lifestyles. With the help of a $10,000 grant from The Dayton Foundation in 2005, Learning Tree Farm, a hands-on learning facility set in a traditional farm setting, created the Farm, Fun & Fitness program to respond to this growing epidemic.

Wheelbarrow races, water bucket relays and obstacle courses motivate students to move as they jump over hay bales and swing from the rafters of a sheep barn. Activity logs and health-related worksheets help teachers and students continue the momentum at school and at home.

Farm, Fun & Fitness has been a rousing success,” said Bruce Macke, executive director of Learning Tree Farm. “The children learn that exercise can be fun, and they learn how to make healthy choices in life. We would not have been able to present the program without The Dayton Foundation’s support.”

New Van Gives Rides to Seniors

More than 600 Greene County senior citizens rely on Golden Age Senior Citizens Center to provide them with transportation every day. Whether it’s driving clients to doctor appointments or the grocery store, the Center has vans on the road five days a week and drives an average of more than 100,000 miles annually.

Because this use can put a lot of wear and tear on a vehicle, Golden Age Senior Citizens Center needed to purchase a new van. With the help of a matching grant from The Dayton Foundation in 2005, Golden Age purchased a new 18-passenger van with a wheelchair lift.

“Without our service, many seniors would not be able to get to their dialysis treatments, chemotherapy or other appointments, or even go grocery shopping,” said Judy Baker, executive director of the Center. “The old vehicle required continual maintenance and repairs. Without the Foundation’s matching grant, we would not have been able to purchase this much-needed new van.”

Tips on Charitable Giving
Using IRA Assets Tax Free for Charity

Holders of traditional IRAs can make direct charitable transfers up to $100,000 per year, without first counting it as income and paying income tax. The provision only applies to contributions made this year and in 2007.

As a qualified public charity, The Dayton Foundation can help donors execute the transfer and choose from several charitable fund options for their gift. Donor-Advised Funds do not qualify for tax-free IRA transfers, although Scholarship Funds, most Designated Funds, Field-of-Interest Funds and Unrestricted Funds do qualify.

Here are three charitable options available to someone interested in gifting their IRA assets.

Emerging Community Needs Fund of The Dayton Foundation: Meeting ever-changing community needs. IRA transfers to the Foundation address a broad range of current and future needs, including arts and culture, community development, education, environment, health and human services, and help the Foundation award strategic grants to select projects and programs.

For people who care deeply about their community and its people, this fund is an excellent way to address our most pressing needs, today and tomorrow.

Field-of-Interest Funds of The Dayton Foundation: Connecting personal values to high-impact opportunities. IRA transfers to Field-of-Interest Funds allow donors to target gifts to causes important to them: arts, health, education, the environment, youth welfare and more. The Foundation awards grants to community organizations and programs addressing the donor’s specific interest area.

For those who are passionate about a single cause, Field-of-Interest Funds provide strategic, lasting support, even as needs change over time.

Designated Funds of The Dayton Foundation: Helping local organizations sustain themselves and grow.

IRA transfers to Designated Funds allow donors to support the good work of a specific not-for-profit organization – a senior center, museum or any qualifying nonprofit charitable organization.

For people who want to help secure the future of their favorite charity, our endowed Designated Funds give not-for-profits a steady stream of income, plus planned giving and investment management services.

We’re happy to talk with interested individuals or their financial advisors about how they can take advantage of this valuable IRA opportunity. Contact Joe❛ Baldare, at (937) 225-9954, or at jbaldare@daytonfoundation.org.
Establishing a strong foundation for our community’s future is a vision shared by donors who have endowment funds at The Dayton Foundation. Donors recently started the following new funds to support our region and their special charitable causes, now and in the future.

The Camp for Kids Who Can’t Fund was established by Charles Horn, trustee of the James W. Beattie Trust, to help send to camp deserving children who otherwise would not be able to attend, due to financial need.

The Dayton-Montgomery County Scholarship Fund provides financial assistance to eligible students who are admitted to a college or university. The Dayton-Montgomery County Scholarship Program, founded in 1981, awards 500-600 scholarships annually to students in participating Montgomery County high schools or to students who have received their GED equivalent.

Family Service Association Legacy Fund supplies unrestricted operating income for this community organization designed to improve the lives of Miami Valley families.

The Frank and Becky Levinson’s steadfast commitment to support charitable causes, such as the arts and other long-term philanthropic programs within the community.

The Conard Family Fund was established by the wife and daughter of Robert C. Conard, a former educator with Troy City Schools. The fund serves to honor his memory through grants to charitable organizations, now and in the future.

The John J. Murphy Memorial Scholarship Fund will provide annual scholarships to students who have received their GED equivalent. The Murphy family, it honors John J. Murphy, whose love for education kept him attending classes at the University of Dayton until age 85.

The Evangeline Spahr Lee Endowment Fund will aid in purchasing new books, particularly books pertaining to travel and books for the children’s section at Taylor Memorial Public Library in Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio. Rev. Harvey Smith and his wife, Carolyn Smith, established this fund in memory of Carolyn’s cousin, Evangeline Spahr Lee.

The Mattie Lyle Fund to Benefit Bethel Baptist Church will provide annual financial aid charitable organizations, now and in the future.

The Greater Dayton Area Council of Camp Fire USA for awarding camperships to individuals who aren’t financially able to attend camp.

The Montgomery County Science Day Fund sponsors the annual Montgomery County Science Day, a science fair that enables students to create and showcase original scientific research projects at a local level.

The African-American Community Fund*

The Hazel Scott Fund for the Benefit of the African-American Community Fund will provide annual grants to address emerging community needs in the African-American community.

The Dayton Foundation for its 47th consecutive year. With 2006 being her 50th year and more than 50 plays. Ms. Scott also teaches at the Bethel Dramatic Guild.
